Brutal Creative Disruption

METHODOLOGY

Campaigns are seasonal, brands ensure the test of time.

In order to create unique branding that does in fact stand the test of time, we follow a four-step methodology that is strongly based in research and key branding and design experience.

The first step is Discovery, where we start with an open conversation about the brand and its unique story. The next step is additional research and analysis of similar or competitor brands in the market to gain insights about the market. The next step is Foundation, where the basis of the brand and its strongest markers are laid. The main communication objectives of the brand and its primary platform are decided. This sets the base for the next step - Creation.

Creation involves the design of the brand identity- this includes colors, fonts, look and feel and general theme. The colors chosen are based in color theory and the fonts are chosen to reflect the image the brand wishes to portray.

The next step is Activation, where the identity is taken off its basic form and rendered into real-life application. This steps includes the creation of branding guidelines and mockups of the branding's application in various marketing articles.
